UpdateKit Translation File Creation

Guidelines to Keep in Mind

- Use the correct capitalization for each string. Some strings use Sentence case and some use Title Case. Some languages do not use capitalization this way, in which case you should defer to best practices for your language.
- Capitalize "Shortcuts" when referring to the app and referring to actual shortcut files (or an individual shortcut).
- Consider not translating the following words:
  - iCloud Drive (unless Apple translates the name of this product in your language)
  - Any part of a file path, including the word "Shortcuts" - just insert them as they are into the correct part of the translated string. Generally these file paths are the same regardless of a user's iOS language setting.
- You will see {{variableNames}} in the strings below. Please do not translate those, but insert them where the variable should go in the translated string. They are not case-sensitive, but they should always be enclosed in double curly brackets so that UpdateKit can find them and replace them with the appropriate variable.

Strings to Translate (Current as of UpdateKit 4.0)

In the table below you will find the JSON key for each string, the English version of the text, the preferred capitalization (see guidelines above) and any applicable notes.

Please note that the keys are case-sensitive and must be entered exactly as they appear below.
